SCARCITY OF PRINT PARER

Government Ivestigation Shows That Paper Situation Is Not a Temporary One, But One Which May Grow Even More Serious.

Canadian Embargo on Pulp Wood Tends to Create a Monopoly Beyond Our Borders to the Great Detriment of the People of the United States

WASHINGTON - The acuteness of the paper situation in the United States lends an added interest to Senator Underwood's resolution, which passed the senate without opposition, and is now before the house committee on foreign affairs. It authorizes the appointment of a commission to confer with the Canadian Dominion government, or the provincial governments of Quebec, Ontario and New Brunswick, in respect to the cancellation of restrictive orders in council prohibiting the exportation of pulp wood cut from crown (public) lands, the chief source of the pulp wood supply, unless manufactured into lumber, pulp or paper "thereby tending," says the resolution, "to create a monoply beyond our borders in the manufacture of paper, to the great détriment of the people of the United States."

"It must be remembered," said Senator Underwood, "that not only is one of the great industries of this country involved, but to a certain extent its very existence is threatened by the fact of the limitation of newsprint paper. The newspapers of this country cannot proceed with their business unless they have an adequate and a reasonable supply. The vastness of the industry I cannot tell offhand, but the senators know that aside from the newspaper feature of the matter, this is one of the very large industries of the United States, and here is an order in council of the Dominion government of Canada that is absolutely preparing to throttle its life, or force the manufacturers of all newsprint paper across the Canadian line, and if they go across our government will lose control of the industry. The newspapers of this country will' be absolutely in the hands of the manufacturers of newsprint paper in Canada.'

The seriousness of the situation and the need of immediate relief. led to this resolution for direct dealing with the Canadian government, rather than through the usual diplomatic channel of London but it was stated that Canada is desirous of taking to herself to a large extent her foreign relations, and even contemplates sending her own diplomatic representatives to this country.

In a comprehensive review of the situation, written with relation the reforestation of pulp wood lands, the secretary of agriculture set forth facts showing that the ro famine should ever visit it. Beprospect for the future is worse cause of this the city is sometimes rethan the present. While the use of wood pulp on a large scale for or Angels." papermaking has been practically developed within the last 50 years, its growth has been remarkable. In 1899 our consumption was 569,-000 tons; in 1918 it was 1,860,000 tons, an increase of about 200 per cent, although our population had prize at the head of one of them increased about 70 per cent only, and beat it. Only one-third of the American newspapers issued in 1919 were printed on the product of American forests. This startling change had taken place in 10 years. Our dependence upon the Canadian pulp wood was shown by the fact that in 1918 we imported from there 1,370,000 cords of pulp wood, and wood which cost $10 per cord in 1916 was as high as $25 in 1919. In 1918 we produced 3,313,861,tons of wood pulp, of which 1,374,504 tons were mechanical or ground wood and 1,456,633 tons sulphite, these two being used in the manufacture of newsprint in the proportion of four of the first to one of the latter. Before the war groundwood pulp cost about $14 per ton to low cost of newsprint made the cheap American newspaper possible and this in turn greatly stimulated the demand for newsprint.

Meanwhile Canada, according to the secretary of agriculture, by welcoming the manufacture of pulp and paper in her own territory, has absorbed the North American expansion in newsprint production. Tom had none of the weapons of The prohibition of export of pulp wood from crown lands was pri- So you will have to imagine it you marily to force mapufacture on Canadian soil, and so successfully was this done that in 10 years preceding 1919 Canadian pulp mills increased in number 57 per cent, and the output increased many times because of the installation of the most modern equipment, while our own industry was at a standstill. It has remained so, centered largely in the Northwest and Lake states, where the annual cut exceeds by two or three times the forest growth, while in New England there is every indication that the supplies will be exhausted within 20 years. In New York, where nearly 50 per cent of the manufacturing industry is located, at the present rate of cutting, the supply will be exhaust- In the moonlight a rifle did flash; ed in 10 years. Nor is the Canadian outlook encouraging. It is expected that in The trigger fell with a metallic the eastern provinces the available supply will be practically exhausted His praise might have been heraldwithin 25 years, and the only province where expansion on a large scale is expected is British Columbia, and even this may not be sufficient to offset the probable decline in eastern Canada.

This shows that the paper situation is not a temporary one, but one which may grow more serious. The great increase in price, owing to the scarcity, may be partly met by advancing the prices of newspapers and the rates of advertising, and by reducing the size of the publications, but these do not strike at the root of the matter. As Secretary Houston said, "A normal and increasing demand can be met most satisfactorily by increased production. Any decrease in the consumption rate will be necessarily due to serious shortage of supplies or prohibitive prices, and in any case can not be viewed without

GREAT NEED IS PRODUCTION

Men Must Be Given Inducement to Work and Guaranteed Fair Dealing in the Distribution of the Result

Article VI.

By FRANK COMERFORD.

The world lives by two kinds of work, the work on the soil and the labor spent in making things. In this way we get the things we eat and wear. We have eaten up our surplus. The world's reserve is gone. We are literally living from hand to mouth. To overcome the food shortage we must put every inch of available ground into production. Only by doing this can we live and gradually get back the surplus which stood as a protection against crop failures.

Production is not automatic, it is the work of man. There is not anything complex about it. You can't use magic. To grow things men must plow and gather. The will to work is our greatest need. The land is available. God furnishes the sunshine and the rain. To get the plows, tractors and farm tools we must look to the industrial arm of life. Here again is the call for men. We are short of man power. Men were killed and crippled in the war. The men who survived the war must help do the work that would have been done by those who did not come back. In their present frame of mind they do not will to work, at least under the old conditions obtaining before the war. It is necessary to furnish them with an inducement to work. There was little inducement for men to work before the war. The discontented are not kicking at work. Their objection goes to the unfairness shown in distributing the result. It isn't any secret. They are shouting it from the housetops of Europe, they demand a larger share of the things they produce, or they refuse to work. There is a good deal of human nature in it, too. It is only human nature to think of self. There isn't anything unnatural in the workingman looking for reward. Willingness to work is largely based on the thought of working for oneself.

Five things are necessary to start and keep production going. In other words, to get the clothes, shoes, stockings, coal and comforts of life, to give the farmer the tools he needs for agricultural production, so that we may eat; to provide the transportation necessary to collection and distribution, to bring the city to the country and the country to the market we must do five essential things.

Production's First Need.

First, we must have plants, and Iuse the word in the most general sense. These plants must be equipped with machinery and tools, they must be ready for work.

Second, a plant is useless and terial, the thing furnished by nature that man and machine work into the finished product.

Third, we must have coal. Coal runs the machine and keeps warm the home of the man who runs the machine. The helplessness of the world without coal is brought home to me while I am writing these articles. The miners have left the pit. The government, through the courts, has tried to force them back. The effort is a failure. The streets are dark at night. The houses are cold. Business is crying out against necessary restrictions imposed because of the coal shortage. I realize as I never have before how dependent we are on the men who pick and dig the coal. All of the intelligence and culture, the courts, the gold, are but symbols of power. When the copl miners folded their hands and set their teeth things stopped.

Fourth, transportation is necessary to the gathering, collecting and delivering of raw material and the distribution of the finished product. •

Fifth, and last, but first in importance, is man power. The purpose of production is man. He is master of it at every stage, in every department. Without him production is impossible. The business men who proceed on the theory that men could not live without their business, its pay roll, forget the first and greater truth that there would be no business without the workers. Man cuts, digs, gathers and hauls the raw material. He hews the wood. builds the plant. He mines the ore, he makes the tools, the machinery. He oils it, sets it in motion. He runs it. He makes the furnace and the boiler. He digs and shovels the coal which makes the power. He defies the heat of the furnace. He builds the locomotive and pulls its throttle. He makes the freight car and stands in the sleet in the dangerous railroad yard with the signal of safety. Railroads All Worn Out.

Transportation in Europe is partly paralyzed. During the war railroad tracks and roadbeds were allowed to deteriorate. It could not be helped, but the fact that it was unavoidable doesn't alter the situation. Roadbed and rails have fallen to pieces. There is a terrible shortage of cars. Everywhere on the Continent this is felt.

They have less than a third of the rolling stock necessary to meet normal requirements. The demand for trans portation facilities will necessarily increase during the period of reconstruc tion. I have seen locomotives sneezing, coughing, expiring every few miles. Old, broken-down engines, the kind one expects to find in a museum. I was on a de luxe train, a diplomatic express. I commented upon the con dition of the locomotive, which came to a full stop every once in a while. I commented upon the condition of the coaches. The chief of the train looked at me, 'smiled and said: "If you think this one is bad you ought to see some of the others.'

The war disarranged plants and factories. The demand was for munitions. Peace gave way to war and plant equipment efficient for peace production gave way to plant construction necessary to manufacture the weapons of war. Plants were commandeered. Machinery was forn out, new machinery put in. A complete reconstruction and reorganization was effected. Now that the war is over and the demand for everything is great, it is necessary to change these plants back and fit them for the production needed. It is expensive, it takes time, it retards production.

It is strange that, while everyone can see and understand the difficulties and delays incident to reorganizing and rearranging machinery and plants, many people cannot see or understand the problem of rearranging men's lives, who for four years have been living abnormally. The effect of the war upon plants and equipment is conceded by the very man who refused to see any effect of the war on the men who were in it.

Women in Labor World.

During the war women answered the roll call. They left their homes and went to work. There is hardly a kind of work that I can think of that I have not seen women doing in Europe. I have seen them loading boats, shoveling coal, washing windows, driving wagons, cleaning streets, conductors on trams. Many of the women who went into the industries were young women. Now that the war is over and the men have come back there is a demand on the part of the men that the women retire to their homes. This is impossible in many cases, for these women have grown dependent upon their jobs for their living. Then, too, there is a shortage of marriageable men. Some employers of labor have taken advantage of this situation. They pay a woman less money than they pay a man for the same work. This makes both dissatisfied. The woman has the sympathy of the working man. He doesn't want her to compete with him to the extent that his wages will be lowered, neither does he want the boss to discriminate against her.

Women have come into the world of work to stay. If there is any meaning in the phrase "class conscious," they are living examples of it. They are more outspoken about their demands than men. They sense a wrong long before a man can see it. They have brought their intuition into the labor world. They are more radical than men, and they stimulate men to action. They have brought to the labor prob-Iem a new and interesting angle.

The key to the future is in the hands of these men and women. Production is the door that must be opened. Men and women must work, or winter and want will make a No Man's Land of Europe before the sun of 1920 thaws the frost from the ground.

Children crying for bread, shivering state in which it would are praying that men will work when they pray to God for good and warmth. Their help cries are smothered by a great blanket-unrest. Will men hear Dickens' Tribute to the Cow.

If civilized peoples were to lapse into the worship of animals, the cow would certainly be their chosen goddess. What a fountain of blessing is the cow! She is the mother of beef, the source of butter, the original cause of cheese, to say nothing of shoehorns, haircombs and upper leathers. A gentle, amiable, ever-yielding creature, who has no joy in her family affairs that she does not share with man. We rob her of her children, that we may rob her thereafter of her milk; and we only care for her when the robbery may be perpetrated .- Charles Dickens.

Approaching the End. Cicero in his dialogue entitled "De Senectute" makes one of his interlocutors say that all men wish to attain old age and yet complain of the fact when they have attained it. He adds that one of the grievances of the old is that age steals over them more rapidly than they expected. It is pointed out that we cannot prevent time from passing, and that even if we lived eight hundred instead of eighty years the past time, however long, cannot when it has flown away be able to "soothe with any consolation for an old age of folly."

A Sister Wilhelm Did Not Like.

Princess Charlotte of Meningen, sister of the ex-kaiser, who died recently, had been a sufferer for years and had undergone many operations. She pass-ed most of her time on the Riviera. Indeed, the princess was a wonnin you couldn't miss. She wore bobbed hair, when no other woman had ever dreamed of such a thing, and talked democracy, and smoked all the time. The exkniser was rather alarmed at her vagaries and preferred his other sister. Queen Sophie of Greece, who is more his sort .- London Mail.

DANGER IN GENERAL UNREST

Practically Universal Feeling of Discontent Will Grow Unless the Causes Which Gave It Birth Are Removed.

specter haunts Europe. It is the ghost of unrest. When I started out to interview unrest in Europe I did not give my ear to the idle theorist who always knows all about everything, but never from direct experience with it, nor did I go to the agitator who preaches unrest in red words Neither did I seek out the type of fanatical labor leader, who is eager for trouble, who is trying to mobilize unrest and marshal it under the banner of Revolution. I passed by the placehunting, time-serving politician. I was not interested in platitudes and prom-

I sought knowledge of unrest from those who knew it from contact with it, those who were part and parcel of it. I went to the man in the street, the average man. I talked with the sweaty, dirty coal miner at the mouth of the shaft. He had just come from his day in the darkness deep in the ground. I visited the man who works in the mills. I listened to the rough speech of the teamster. I went to factories and talked with men between the two whistles which mark the time of the noon meal. They munched at black bread, ate cheese or sausage, gulped tea, coffee or cheap, diluted red wine. I spent time with the idle, the idle by choice as well as those without work through no fault of their own. Only yesterday many, yes, most of these men were in khaki; now, back on the job in overalls, they were thinking. Their speech was troubled. Discontent looked out from their eyes. I could feel it. They talked it, but never as unrest, always protest.

Unrest Must Be Quieted.

Their state of mind is the problem. Unrest is epidemic; it is militant. There is little of pacifism in it. It is real, it is not without cause. To get close to the cause of this disease which threatens revolution, one must know and understand what is going on in the minds of the men we are looking to and depending upon to do the world's work. It doesn't take a prophet to understand that if heed is not given to the things irritating them and a remedy is not found for the irritation, serious trouble will follow. While war is hell, it has at least the restraint of discipline. A revolution growing out of unrest would mean mob madness, terrorism, fanatical, brutal, cruel and merciless. Once started, it would spread like wildfire. The world would be swept from its senses. The fire would run its course until stopped because there was nothing left to burn. Who dares picture the in the cold these bleak winter nights, world? In this day, when the nerves of the world are on edge, when cold and hunger irritate, one shudders when he thinks of the fate of civilization if unrest is not checked before it explodes in passion and wrath.

Unrest existed before the war. It was an acorn then, it is an oak now. Before the war men were complaining. and justly complaining, about their lot, The difference now is that four years in the trenches have caused them to stop complaining and act. Soldiering taught them much. They learned of the greatness of force. Back of their present tendency to act is the grown grievance and the war lesson. Before the war they complained; today they demand. It is interesting to examine unrest in the Adults, as well as children, stand and complaint stage, as these men knew it before 1914.

These plain, ordinary average men have always been intensely human. They loved their wives and children, they lived for their homes, they felt keenly their responsibility for the happiness oftheir loved ones. They have but one thing to give. Before the war they gave it unsparingly-it was their labor. Their one source of income was the pay envelope. With their wages and provide shelter for the lives they brought into the world, and for the women they had chosen to be the mothers of those children. "Home" Before All.

"Home, Sweet Home" is the international anthem. It is the heart song of the average man. The club plays no part in his life. From his home he goes to work, and from work he goes home. Shanties and tenements are not homes. These men have always protested against the ugly shacks in which they were compelled to house their loved ones. They bit their lips in jobless days when their children went to bed hungry. Resentment grew in their hearts when they saw how poorly dressed their wives and children were. They muttered curses when their children were forced to go shevism at 12,280,000 lives. Professor to work. They wanted to give their Ossendoffský says that formerly the children a better education than they Russian population increased at the had had, a better chance in life, and rate of four persons a minute. Today they laughed at laws prohibiting child it is decreasing at the rate of twelve labor, while conditions compelled chil- to thirteen a minute.

dren to work or starve. As these men grew older their families grew in size and demand, while their ability to earn decreased. The tragedy registered in their pay envelopes. They were being ground between growing needs and diminishing wages. The grinding not only hurt their bodies, it furrowed their brain.

They lived in dread of poverty. It had been their nurse, they feared it would be their pallbearer. Poverty had taken its revenge upon them. They were resolving that if they could help it it would not put its lash upon their children. They knew poverty intimately. It wasn't a word, a name it was a living hateful, cruel companion. It was the devil that recruited the Marys of Scarlet Hall, the Magdalens of the slums, and always the army was mobilized from the shantles of the poor. Children who had been robbed of their youth, who had never owned a flower, poorly fed and miserably clad, dragged out of bed by alarm clocks, sounding the call to toil. when they should have been answer ing the school bell, children physical ly unfit for the breadwinner's strug gle, children without the moral en durance necessary for the fight, were driven into No Woman's land, the rotten scum under the world.

Light in Education.

Before the war men were brooding on these things, papers, books, magazines mirroring life, pictured these horrors. They were the subject of public discussion and debate. Men returning from a hard day's work talked these things over with their wives aft er the children had gone to bed, and many a man left his supper table to peek through the half-closed door into the room where his kiddles were sleep ing, tiptoeing back, only to look into the eyes of a mother, and see reflected there the fears he felt.

The invention of the typesetting ma chine, the cheap manufacture of paper the growth of public school systems and public libraries, brought light to the dark minds of the workmen. In that light they saw more clearly their needs and more completely realized their rights. It is the natural ambition of man to climb. He wants to get on and up. Ignorance had kept him from climbing. Ignorance is darkness. Men stumble when they try to go forward in the dark. Education is the light in the road. They sought to make haste, to make up for the lost time, Education taught them to want things for themselves and their families that their fathers and mothers never thought of wanting. The homes which satisfied their parents depressed and irritated them. The bathtub and tooth brush are acquired habits. The desire to straighten the back that has been bent in toil too long, is put there by education.

One thing stood in the way-it obstructed the path upward to decent living. They saw the barrier clearly and distinctly-poverty. They saw this impassable obstacle was made out of poor wages. They saw more, They saw that poor wages built the poorhouses and filled them, organized the bread lines, introduced the soup house. Out of their thoughts, in their experience, they carved a truth, "As long as some people have more than they can possibly use, while others through no fault of their own have less than they absolutely need, something is wrong, and when the call to arms came these thoughts were living in the mass mind of the world. Many not concerned with the problem of the other seven-eighths, knowing nothing of what was happeneave the ing in the minds of the men and women of toil, and caring less, they did not know that these men were uniting and planning to tear down the wall of poverty.

Contradiction in Berlin.

Fats, oils, clothes, milk for bables and other necessities are scarce in Berlin, and so high-priced that the poorer people can hardly afford them at all; yet the shop windows along Unter den Linden are full of beautiful goods.

Housing conditions pinch despite the fact that Berlin and other cities have less population than before the war. Every candy store window in Berlin has a crowd before it all day long. stare at the displays of sweets.

Movies-most of them immoral-are always crowded. Twelve new moving picture houses are to be erected. The most popular firms are those "on the ragged edge."

Theaters are crowded, and so is the opera, as a rule.

Some of them saw ten and twelve months' service in France and Belgium before the armistice.

Prominent Fur Buyer Dead

Alvin Goldstein, aged 28 years son of Charles Goldstein, pioneer business man of Juneau, passed away on Wednesday of last week after a hard battle with pneumonia, following an attack of influenza, surrounded by relatives. For hours, Juneau had waited ex pectantly for news from the bedside, hoping against hope that a turn for the better would come. When it was announced from the Goldstein home that death had claimed the suffering patient, the shock was tremendous and the whole town has been shrouded in grief.

The funeral will be at San Francisco and the burial will be in the family plot in that city.

Alvin Goldstein was born at San Francisco, February 12, 1892. His early years were spent in that city and Juneau. After leaving school, he immediately became associated with his father

Nothing gives the world such a thrill as real, sure enough liberty. One of the great attractions of the movies, especially such pictures as the "Passing of the Third Floor Back," is the thrill that comes from seeing those bound by all kinds of fraud and nastynes, set free. Can what takes place in fiction actually be realized in everyday experiences? Can all life be a real joyous comedy where there is liberty, rather than a harrowing tragedy? This will be the theme at St. Philip's Church on Sunday evening, April 11 at 7:30 p. m.

SIX MONTHS ON ICE FLOE

Arctic Explorer and Companions
Dared Death to Obtain Knowledge of Beaufort Sea's Currents.

Storker T. Storkerson, who passed six-months adrift on a huge ice floe in the Arctic ocean, reached Edmonton, Alta., en route to Banff, where he reported to Vilhjalmur Stefansson, his chief, on observations made during his unique cruise.

With 14 followers Storkerson set out from Border island with 80 dogs and eight sledges and in May, 1918, selected an ice floe on which he purposed to remain for a year or more with the object of determining the currents, if any, in Beaufort sea, taking soundings and discovering new land. Stefansson had intended to accompany the expedition but at the last moment was taken ill and was forced to return to civilization.

Storkerson is inclined to believe, owing to certain phenomena observed, that land exists north of the point reached by his party on the ice floe.

The floe upon which the party embarked was seven miles wide and fifteen miles in length. Seals, polar bears, ducks, gulls and land birds abounded on it. Shrimps and shell-fish appeared to be the chief food of the seals, according to Storkerson.

ADD TO STAMP COLLECTIONS

Philatelists Enthusiastic Over the Number of Specimens From the Smaller European States.

Stamp collecting has lately had its full share of novelty for English adherents, and collectors in London are enthusiastic over the curious postage stamps which are beginning to reach them from the smaller European states. One example from Lithuania-of the first permanent issue of that country-has been lithographed on heavy Silurian gray paper, which formerly was used for the printing of bread tickets. Lettland, Lithuania's neighbor, printed its first stamps on the backs of German ordnance maps; but these were somewhat unwieldy, and now its stamps are printed on flimsy tissue paper. There are other specimens, too, but those cited serve to illustrate the nature of the latest philatelic harvest and how welcome are the postage stamps of a free nation in place of all the bread cards or German war maps ever devised.

LEARNING GOLF.

Some years ago the majority of women knew nothing about golf, and many good anecdotes are told of some of the curious ideas they held regarding the game. One lady, making sympathetic conversation at dinner, said to a keen golfer, "I often see you in your red coat. Do you need many dogs to play golf?" A young lady said she knew exactly how the game was played. "They get what they call caddies to hunt about in the grass till they find a round stone, and then they hit it into a rabbit hole." A third lady, who had evidently enjoyed a nearer view of the game, said, "It is played by two men. One is a gentleman and the other is a common man. The common man sticks a ball on a lump of dirt and the gentleman knocks it off!"

HIS OPINION.

"I observe," said Professor Pate, "that there is going on among the bards an acrimonious wrangle over the statement, recently published, that Kansas City has the worst poet in the world."

"None of them need be jealous," snarled J. Fuller Gloom. "Any poet is the worst in the world. Every poet is worse than every poet."—Kansas City Star.

NEWLYWED STYLE.

A young farmer's bride who recently undertook the management of the horticultural department of the farm writes the agricultural editor as follows: "What can I do to make my potatoes grow? I peeled them ever so carefully before planting them, but they haven't even come up yet."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

STILL UNDER DEBATE.

"The world was created within a week, according to Genesis."

"Yes," replied Senator Sorghum;
"but according to the Congressional Record it is for from being completed."

We gain nothing by being with such as ourselves; we encourage each other in mediocrity. I am always longing to be with men more excellent than myself.—Lamb.

Good words do more than hard speeches, as the sunbeams without any noise will make the traveler cast off his cloak, which all the blustering winds could not do, but only make him bind it closer to him.—Leighton.

The most natural beauty in the world is honesty and normal truth; for all beauty is truth. True features make the beauty of a face; and true proportions the beauty of architecture; as true measures that of harmony and music. In poetry, which is all fable, truth still is the perfection.
